Orlando, FL, June 15, 2004 - CompuChicks, Inc. announces a recent company expansion to appeal to the small businesses in Central Florida.

Carrie Miles, President and Founder of CompuChicks is pleased to add CompuDudes - a new division of the company specializing in stabilizing and supporting the networks of small businesses across the Central Florida area. In addition, the new division will provide unparalleled expertise in hardware troubleshooting, virus and Trojan eradication, and network installations.

"Small to medium size businesses are struggling with the new viruses, adware and Trojans in the Information Technology (IT) space and we are here to alleviate those concerns" said Miles. "The computer network is the lifeline of a small business - without it many businesses are completely paralyzed and unable to operate. At CompuChicks and within our CompuDudes division, we not only provide a virtual IT department but also consult with our clients to support their computer infrastructure on an ongoing basis. In other words, we provide the IT support for them to continue to be agile in their respective business areas." Miles advises that the goal of her company is to provide a comprehensive mix of business and technical strategies to help their clients maximize their IT efficiencies and, ultimately, their profits.

CompuChicks, located in Orlando, Florida, has been installing computers, firewalls, networking components, and supporting business and vertical markets software since 2002. In addition, they are authorized to provision data and telecommunications with providers such as BellSouth and Sprint. The company can be reached at 1-877-UGO-CHIX or www.compuchicks.com.
